Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 06 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
A cold night with a risk of patchy snow tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Remaining dry through the evening and overnight, however largely clear skies will lead to very cold temperatures. This will introduce a risk of patches of freezing fog, and potentially icy conditions. Light breeze throughout. Minimum temperature -6 deg C (21 deg F).

Thursday:
A frosty, bright start - though any patches of freezing fog will be slow to clear. Turning cloudy through the afternoon, accompanied by outbreaks of light rain, sleet, and snow. Maximum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
A few outbreaks of rain, snow, and sleet on Friday. Remaining dry through Saturday. Cold across these days with sunny spells, and overnight frosts. Turning cloudy and milder on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.